Guidance

Although we advise that you consult a solicitor before altering the terms of your will, you can alter the terms of your current will using our document-called a Codicil.

Do not try to alter the terms of your current will by making deletions or adding provisions by writing on the will as the changes may not be valid.

Our Codicil is provided to be of assistance to you and allows you to leave a cash gift to the Glasgow Hebrew Burial Society. Your solicitor will be able to help if you wish to bequeath to us the whole or part of the residue of your estate or a specific asset rather than a cash bequest.

Please print this Codicil and complete in INK by filling in the following details-

1. Your full name including any middle name
2. Your full address
3. The date your current will was signed
4. The amount you are kind enough to bequeath to us, expressed in words and then in figures

Once you have completed the details, are happy with the document and that you understand the document, please sign and have your signature witnessed by one witness.

The witness must be present when you sign the Codicil and should sign and complete his/her details in your presence.

Once the Codicil is completed, signed and witnessed, please place the Codicil with your current will, or send it to the person who looks after your will e.g. your solicitor.

Many thanks for remembering us in this way.
